

About the Honorees
Baltimore County Commission on Disabilities
2020 Awards Program

David Goodman, owner of Mobile Eyewear Services, receives the Accessibility Award for his efforts to meet a critical need by providing in-home eye care services to people with disabilities.

Dr. Terri Massie-Burrell, Director of Student Disability Services for Johns Hopkins University, receives the Advocate Award for her many years of steadfast advocacy for individuals with disabilities in a variety of educational settings.

Glenn Myers, an employee of Pathfinders for Autism, receives the Employee Award for the valuable lessons and guidance he provides through training sessions with members of the county Police Department.

Bruce Reinke, food service director for Culinary Services Group, receives the Employer Award for his commitment to providing guidance, employment opportunities and educational services to individuals with disabilities.

Bryce Muneses, a student at Perry Hall High School, receives the Student of the Year Award for overcoming medical challenges early in life, exemplary student achievements and exhibiting a positive attitude that inspires others.

Brandi Corriggio, the Individual Education Program Chair at Battle Monument School, receives the Teacher of the Year Award for providing many years of outstanding service to students and staff of a unique school dedicated to educating students with disabilities.

Grace Simms and Ashley Chamblee receive the Virtual Employee Award for hosting fun, engaging virtual meetings for clients of Chimes that give participants a lively, social place to go in the virtual world.

Grace

Ashley